Weapon and Superhero Play Policy.

Introduction

Most children enjoy engaging in imaginative play that relates to, and makes sense of, the world that they live in. For lots of children this imaginative play contains a strong element of weapon and Super Hero re-enactment. Re-enacting weapon use is a universal language of play for children and usually results in high levels of engagement for the children actively involved in it.

Images and ideas gleaned from the media are common starting points in play and may involve characters with special powers or weapons. Adults can find this type of child play particularly challenging and have a natural instinct to stop it. This is not necessary as long as practitioners help the boys to understand and respect the rights of other children and to take responsibility for the resources and environment. As the EYFS states:

"Value play which is based on characters, such as superheroes who may mean a lot to children, even if you do not appreciate them yourself!" (EYFS card 4.3 Learning and Development)

Creating situations so that children's interests in these forms of play can be fostered through healthy and safe risk-taking will enhance every aspect of their learning and development.

Rational

At Bollinbrook Pre-school we feel it is important to create a whole setting approach of which staff, children, parents, committee and other agencies have a clear understanding. This policy is a formal statement of our approach to children's weapon and Super Hero imaginative play

Aims

The commitments linked to the principle of Learning and Development help us to understand how children learn actively through play, first-hand experiences, creativity and critical thinking. As children learn and develop, they "actively build their own meanings by applying, revising and reapplying what they know." (EYFS card 4.2 Active Learning in depth) Boys often appear to be more active learners than girls, but whether or not there is a gender divide in this respect, active learners need opportunities to make their own decisions and have control over their learning to keep their interest and to develop their creativity.

Equal Opportunities and Inclusion

The children and parents are actively involved in the education process at pre-school and their perceptions about Weapon and Super Hero Play are explored and valued.

The staff will regularly evaluate the impact that actively fostering this element of role play has on the environment, the cohort as a whole and identified groups of children and individuals.

If required a range of support strategies will be put in place to ensure that this style of play does not have any negative impact and we will work with the children to establish 'rules' regarding the play.

Principles that underpin the policy

The principles that underpin our policy are

- Approaches to teaching and learning in role-play should reflect the interests of the children and not exclusively those of the adults
- Planning for role-play in the environment should be based upon assessment information from the observed play of the current cohort.
- Our setting will acknowledge the positive aspects of the character of the Superhero and highlight the negative aspects of weapon use and physical violence at a level that is appropriate to the age and needs of the children. This will be mainly done through story and appropriate discussion.
- Styles of teaching and learning should meet the needs of children and not pre-conceived notions of what is or is not appropriate role-play.
- All children's emotional welfare, well-being and involvement should be assessed in relation to this style of play.
- Children should enjoy the play opportunity.
- The Weapon/Superhero play should motivate and challenge children.
- The creation of an effective culture of Weapon/Superhero play in any setting takes time, and is a process rather than an event.
- Parents and carers need to feel well informed about and comfortable with the settings approach to Weapon/Superhero play and the principals that underpin it.
- Children, parents/carers and staff need to be involved on an equal basis in the formulation and regular review of this policy.

- Effective and engaging play is about our setting fitting the interests of the child, not the child fitting the setting.
- On-going opportunities for quality imaginative play are not overlooked or left to chance, but thought about and planned in advance.

Initial preparations

All staff across our setting must be aware of the thinking that underpins this policy and build its review into our Self Evaluation schedule.

- All staff to observe children's individual and group imaginative play within the setting identifying themes that result in high level engagement.
- Time allocated within planning meetings to discuss the on-going development and management of the settings approach to Weapon/Superhero Play.
- Case studies, further reading and research into this type of play is made available for parent, carer and practitioner reference within the setting.
- An appropriate space both indoor and outdoor is designated for the development of this style of play.
- Resources and enhancements (including appropriate construction materials) are put in place to support this style of play.
- Arrangements are made for passing on information to parents about how/why the setting will use, manage and enhance Weapon/Superhero play
- This policy will be shared with all staff and the management committee.

Creating an appropriate environment

The types of play that boys and girls engage in is enhanced or diminished by the quality of the learning environment inside and out. The EYFS card, Supporting Every Child, flags up that: "Children need sensitive, knowledgeable adults who know when and how to engage their interests and how to offer support at different times." (card 3.2) Practitioners must take responsibility for ensuring the learning environment is planned to Inspire, challenge and intrigue every child. However, sometimes practitioners find the chosen play of boys more difficult to understand and value than that of girls. They may choose activities in which adults involve themselves least, or play that involve more action and a greater use of the available space, especially outdoors.

"Some boys who are at risk of becoming disaffected at a very young age have shown significant improvements if their learning takes place outside. Opportunities which reflect all areas of learning outdoors must be available." (Bilton et al 2005.)

Practitioners need to be aware of the impact of both the emotional and physical environment on the well-being and self-esteem of all children:

Practitioners will:

- involve themselves as much in the boys' choices of role play and learning experiences as the girls'
- see the physical environment as one of the most powerful resources through which children can learn, and carefully plan and monitor how it is used.
- value the outdoor as much as the indoor environment, thinking creatively about the environment and how it can support Weapon/Superhero role play
- experiences and activities we have on offer ensure we meet the needs of boys as well as girls
- are aware that sometimes an interest may be sparked by something immediate in the environment, or something much more long term, such as interest in Weapon/Superhero play.
- ensure role-play areas incorporate children's play themes allowing children to fetch and move resources from one place to another, to enhance their play themes
- ensure all children take equal responsibility in caring for the environment of the setting, tidying up and looking after equipment and each other, fostering a sense of social responsibility.

Building on what children know and understand

Bollinbrook Pre-school will ensure that, through training and development, all staff are aware of the impact of both the emotional and physical environment on the well-being and self-esteem of all children:

- ensure that there are regular opportunities for 'unplanned' role play to allow for children's self-expression and staff observation.
- monitor and record and evaluate the positive aspects of the play that they see, incorporating preferences and themes into future planning
- ensure that the physical environment both indoor and outdoor contains resources that will support and promote children's play.

- provide a variety of resources that will be open ended and ambiguous to allow for individual interpretation and foster an approach of imagination and creativity.
- be aware that the success of some themes and enhancements will differ between cohorts/groups of children, therefore plan to the needs of the current cohort and not necessarily deliver previous plans without evaluation and amendment.
